

We expected to be coming to the land of human rights, but we are experiencing
something completely different to that.

It is so hard for me
wait three years for an interview, to tell someone why I left
my country, and to wait three years until they tell me whether I can stay or not.

Everyone is tired,

there are queues

everywhere, there are

fight in the queues

for the toilets and in the queues for the shower.

We have no facilities.

There is no way to

use electricity; there

is no way to cook

food for ourselves.

In my thoughts,
I came to a land of freedom where I will integrate and gain a new life, a new identity.
But it was the opposite.
I found myself a prisoner here on Samos.

My biggest fear
is to wake up one day and find myself
dead – for my spirit to realise that I'm not alive anymore, that I'm not amongst the living but I am just a dead body.
