AMONG REFUGEES THERE ARE MEN, WOMEN AND
CHILDREN ESCAPING WAR AND PERSECUTION

Escaping war and persecution in a large family is often too difficult as parents/grandparents are often vulnerable. Women face a number of difficulties along migratory routes and can be vulnerable to human trafficking and gender-based violence. Typically, journeys are often more likely to be survived by strong, young men. In the case of both refugees and migrants, those most likely to survive the dangerous journey tend to travel first, to be joined by family members once they have reached safety. The initial trip, involving dangerous sea crossings, smugglers and illegal safe houses, is life-threatening.
